This provision has not been altered much under the 4th AMLD, and neither in the now-current draft of the 5th AMLD. What has changed, is the more prominent requirement to perform transaction and business relationship monitoring, even in cases of simplified and even more in cases of enhanced CDD. The 4th AMLD does include an explicit requirement to perform sufficient transaction and business relationship monitoring (to enable the detection of unusual or suspicious transactions) even if simplified CDD may be applied (article 15 par 3).

At the European Payment Summit held on 8th and 9th of March 2017 in the Hague, the Netherlands, I had the pleasure to discuss one of the new concepts of cybercrime (and money laundering) together with EverCompliant. The presentation was somewhat an eye-opener for many participants in the room, being amazed by what criminals can do in today’s world to launder money. This 2-part blog series outlines what was discussed. Part 1 will familiarize you with the current (regulatory) views of money laundering and explain what transaction laundering entails. Part 2 will discuss whether the most recent changes to the 4th AML Directive (and the upcoming 5th AML Directive) will in fact prevent the newest forms of money laundering.

The ESAS seem to understand the risks around online payments and the need for guidance on how to implement measures. As it states: "...more has to be done to ensure that the Union's AML/CFT defences are effective."

Nothing is said about how these measures should be implemented. And further, if you look at these requirements, it would not necessarily and directly require obliged entities to screen for transaction laundering does it? Most focus is put on unusual, complex transactions with no apparent purpose or high risk countries. As the numbers have shown, the risk of transaction laundering is much greater than just those type of transactions.

And it typically involves the transactions that do not appear unusual or unlawful at first sight. Would you ever consider classifying book store merchants as high risk for money laundering?

The changes fail to put sufficient focus on how measures are to be implemented, while there seems to be a clear need for the industry (see further on this paragraph 6). For example, one of the ways to detect transaction laundering is through transaction monitoring (another way would be checks as part of the CDD/ onboarding process). However, the provisions around transaction monitoring under both versions of the AMLD are still very light (there is a summary at the end of this paragraph). CDD measures include:

Во второй половине «нулевых» и первой половине «десятих» годов фактически не занимался выборами в качестве политтехнолога, сосредоточившись на политологической и академической работе. В конце «нулевых» годов занимался продвижением идеи строительства «Газпром-сити» на Охте. При этом, если его супруга Татьяна Юрьева работала в пресс-службе проекта в качестве официального представителя, Конфисахор, отстаивая идею необходимости башни, выступал в роли «независимого политолога». С 2015 года вновь понемногу начал возвращаться в профессию. Участвовал в Ленобластных губернаторских выборах в штабе Александра Дрозденко. Проводил тренинги для агитаторов в разных районах региона. Позже занимался тем же в штабах «Единой России» на муниципальных областных выборах. Телеграмм-канал “Незыгарь” утверждает, что Гавра “еще с 90-х годов работал с командой Собчака. Знает Путина, Кудрина, Ротенбергов и Ковальчуков. Работал с Шестаковым”. Сам о себе он говорит, что с 1989 года не было “ни одной федеральной или региональной (в том или ином субъекте РФ) избирательной кампании, где бы ни приходилось участвовать”. Тем не менее, в среде петербургских политтехнологов Гавра как представитель профессии пользуется весьма ограниченной известностью. Больше его знают как политолога, социолога, теоретика. While transaction laundering constitutes the newest form of fraud and (even though not many realize yet) it does in fact constitute money laundering. The rise of Payment Facilitators results in increased risks of transaction laundering as well. Many acquirers do not have full insight in Sub-Merchants’ processing websites under a Payment Facilitator or only find out later that a boarded merchant is in fact acting as Payment Facilitator. A PF’s merchant aggregation model enables criminals to create an ecosystem of illicit transaction processing. While the PF model is considered disclosed aggregation, transaction laundering is undisclosed aggregation and therefore closely related to merchant aggregation conducted by PFs (but then the dark side of it). Acquirers that support PFs are voicing concern over the increasing risk of transaction laundering.
