Underneath your machine, cast into the base, should be a model number starting with JA, JC, ect.It is woefully incomplete, however, but a place to start. I had a Dressmaker I finally identified as a 205, it was a JC31.

You might peruse the photos in that yahoo group and see a machine similar to your model with a different name like Deluxe, Domestic, Morse, Remington, Edmeko, Adler, Sewmor, Fleetwood, Nelco, Universal, ect., just to name a few!, which could lead you to a manual for that model. Also if you post your query in that group, you might get more information about your machine. HTH 3 0

Carrying case..Perfect for kids with adult supervision, use in boat, tiny house or RV as it is a very small machine and easy to use. The EuroPro Dressmaker 998B is a portable sewing machine that is ideal for homes that do not have a dedicated sewing area. Easy to carry. Suggestions Thanks much. I am currently using one and it is better than anything i have used before. Its a good basic machine whose popularity makes it easy to get parts for. If you cant get the Viking excellent reputation look for the Stylist on Ebay. Whatever you choose, make sure that it has all metal gears. The fancy stitches can be nice to have, but think twice if you only see yourself doing basic construction. If you want to do decorative stitching check out the electronic machines with interchangeable cartridges for different stitches. this would be your 2nd machine Hope this helps and Good Luck! Reid I took a few machines for test drives was impressed it would sew 8 layers of denim without seeming stressed and also worked well on thin fabrics. It does have metal gears, something I wanted to make sure of thanks Reid. Its SO much smoother than anything else Ive used. Theyre also supposed to be very reliable called around a few shops and all recommended either Elna, Baby Lock or Viking. Please be respectful review our Forum Guidelines prior to posting. If the manual you are requesting is not available and it can be substituted with another like machine manual that offers the same info it will be substituted. On the other hand, a hard to find manual will take a minimum of 2 to 3 weeks to arrive since it takes time for the manufacturer to locate your specific manual. Also note that some manuals may be photocopies and not originals because some manuals are outofprint.

She studied business management at Chowan College. Dressmaker sewing machines are made by EuroPro Operating LLC. The features on your particular Dressmaker model are listed in your users manual, and you should always review the guide prior to operating the sewing machine. Place a spool of thread on the spool pin. Attach the bobbin to the bobbin spindle. Hold on to the thread lightly and it will break as the bobbin is made. The machine will stop when the bobbin is completed. Turn the hand wheel, raising the needle to the highest position. Slide the bobbin in and release the bobbin case latch. Close the front cover. Move the thread down and between the tension discs from right to left. Pull on the thread lightly to make sure the thread is fairly tight. Hold the thread loosely and turn the hand wheel to thread the bobbin up through the face plate. You can now begin sewing. Press the center of the feed dial to use reverse sewing. The sewing machine industry has changed a lot over the years since the machine was first invented and you need a scorecard to keep track of all the players in the sewing machine game. The first thing you need to know about the Dressmaker sewing machine is that it was not a separate sewing machine company. It was not bought out, nor was there a founder. The Dressmaker sewing machine was produced by Singer for many years then around 2014 it was made by EuroPro. To learn more about the dressmaker sewing machine and its history just continue to read our article. It is filled with the information you need to know about the dressmaker sewing machine. Its parts were hard to wear out and brake thus the machine lasted its owners for a long time. Some older models used an outside cam to help you get more decorative stitches onto your clothing item. That was another feature that helped Dressmaker to be bought by many women. It seemed to have a lot of different stitch patterns you could use, more than most machines at the time.

Different models were produced which had different features attached to them. The Dressmaker 300Z looks a lot like the Singer 513 and it is possible that Singer copied their own brands and made clones under different brand names to make sure their share of the sewing machine market remained high. It seems to be a good machine but be careful about paying a too high used price. Who Made Dressmaker Sewing Machines That is because no one is taking credit for producing the Dressmaker brand sewing machine. It is said that Singer made it through the 50s to the end of the 70s but that may not be quite true. A brief look at an article about Singer and there is no mention of them producing that machine even though several Dressmaker models resemble Singer top sewing machines. Also, the word is out that Dressmaker was a Japanese knock off. This is quite possible as there were about 5000 different Japanese brands, many with American sounding names, on the market throughout the late 20 th century, after the second world war. Some people think it is Japanese but no further evidence has pointed to that idea. Then it is said that Euro pro has made the Dressmaker sewing machine since 2014. Actually, that company has been making dressmaker sewing machines since 2011. Prior to that time, Singer had factories around the world and it is possible that they did make the Japanese version in one of those factories. There is supposed to be a Canadian model as well. Finally, someone has claimed that they have a White Dressmaker but again, there is nothing to support that confession either. Dressmaker Sewing Machine Models There is the 300Z which is supposed to be a copy of the Singer 513, plus you can get the 997B, the 998B, and the 1100 Dressmaker II if you look hard enough. Each model had its own special features and while some looked the same, they did not have all the same features on them.

Some had the sliding lever missing but had a silver button for a back stitch and cams for the zigzag and other decorative stitches women like to use. The best feature about the early models is that they were a bit heavy. That weight let you know that the machine was built with all metal parts and it should last you a long time. You can still get the owner's manuals for the different models if you know where to look. Here is the link for the 2402 model. Dressmaker Sewing Machine Serial Numbers One serial number is 539005123 and that should help you locate the parts you need. One place to look would be at the following link. If you know your model and serial number, it can be very helpful in tracking down the parts you need. With that said, it's not usually the serial number that will help you out. It may get you the model number if you do not know what it is. What is important to know is the model number. Usually, people mistake the model and serial numbers and think they are interchangeable but both numbers have their specific purposes and those are not the same. Also, you need to make sure that the Dressmaker you have is not a Japanese clone. That may mess up your search for replacement parts. Where to Buy Dressmaker Sewing Machine Parts Fortunately, finding parts for your Dressmaker is not a mystery like its manufacturer is. There are a lot of places available where you can find spare parts with ease. Some of the usual suspects are eBay, Amazon and other international marketplaces like those two companies. There are specialty companies that deal with sewing machine parts only. They are exclusive in their product line but not in their prices. One company is at this link, another is found by clicking this link, the latter company has over 60,000 parts in its inventory so chances are high you will find what you need. Then if you want, you can join the different sewing forums and ask their members where they find their spare parts and at what cost.

Word of mouth is usually the best way to find the right company to deal with. Or you can check with your local fabric stores and see who they recommend. They usually have such information on hand and love to help out fellow sewing lovers when they need a hand in getting a hard to get sewing machine part. How Much is a Dressmaker Sewing Machine Worth All metal machines command a higher price than plastic parts do. The best place to find a used Dressmaker sewing machine would be at used furniture stores, thrift stores and similar businesses. What to Look for When Buying an Older Sewing Machine Here are some tips to help guide you when you are looking at buying an older used Dressmaker sewing machine. These tips will help you find what to look for as you examine the machine to see if it is worth the price it is offered at Also, look for any holes that are missing screws. If the price is right, then you should buy it unless it has problems in the above areas. If you are good at fixing those problems then those items should not be a factor in your purchase decision. The key is not always who made it but how well the sewing machine was put together. If the Dressmaker was put together well and has all metal parts, then you know you have a machine that is worth the price you are about to pay for it. But be careful as some people place too much value on the machine and over price it. You won't go wrong if you use a dressmaker sewing machine. It will make its sewing contribution like all the other brand names out there.
