I was excited when my friend brought this machine over, cosmetically great shape, full set of cams, manual, and a box of bobbins, zipper foot, and I don't know what else. Once it gets up and running, I think it'll be a great machine for her. The needle gets threaded left to right, and the bobbin gets inserted into the bobbin case with thread leading from left to right so I guess that means that when you pull the bobbin thread, it rotates clockwise as I watch it with the cover off. Sometimes the bobbin housing seems to shift by a tiny amount, it's enough so the needle hits the bobbin housing. Also notice that the upper thread doesn't come down and wrap around the bobbin thread. Any thoughts I do remember having to adjust the needle bar just a smidge. I think it was zigging and zagging but the zag was a hair off on the timing. It was hit and miss when it did zag. I have cams but I found another machine they fit and am happier with that arrangement. If I need parts the worst one gets to be a donor. If you are going to teach someone to sew get an old Singer 15 or a 66. Anyway here is a repair manual I found lately it prints out 50 or 60 pages. They are not what you usually see when you think of all metal Japanese machines. I had one, but thankfully it sold late last year. Ok, having said that. Make sure the bobbin case is snapped in fully. Make sure you are using a Class 15 bobbin. Make sure you are using 15x1 needle and that it's seated correctly. I believe it seats flat to the right. Make sure the needle is straight too. If these steps do not cure the problem, there is a good possibility something's bent or out of time. Joe Mine are still here I just can't inflict them on anybody. Parts.
