Dressmaker 7000 A couple days ago I mentioned I'd picked up a Dressmaker 7000 at Goodwill. It took some time but didn't come with any. It was unfortunate to. I have looked at your info, as well as a bunch of videos. I have threaded the top thread, threaded the bobbin, inserted it and the top thread. But the part I am stuck on How to bring the bottom thread from the bobbin up It will catch the bobbin thread and pull both up. Just slide something under the upraised pressure foot scissor blade and grasp both threads. Now take hold of the upper thread and just pull the lower thread up through the hole, as it will have caught just as if it had made a stitch. Now pull both threads to the back under the presser foot and place your fabric under it. Lower your foot and you are ready to sew! Just got my machine yesterday. Today I replaced the broken check spring and was able to figure out from the illustration on the threading guide that my "wrong" check spring is right one after all. I discovered that the tension assembly dial was loose. It actually came out in my hand. Uh Oh. Got to think this one out. I noticed that there was what appeared to be a set screw hole on the inside and opposite it on the outside of the pillar was a hole with a very small set screw. So, I replaced the tension assembly in the position that I figured would be best, tightened the set screw and test drove her. Well, it worked. She is a basic zig zag machine and sews a perfect stitch with perfect tension. My GD has named her Jocelyn. Oh no, does that mean that she has been bitten by the VINTAGE BUG Great find for your DGD. Yep shes been bit. Um and that is a basic ZZ machine, with all those dials. I wouldnt mind playing with that for a while. Guess Im just a bit greedy. LOL It sure is a pretty one though. She did real good. Elaine She had one of those Plastic things and when she sewed with the 201 the one that DD wont turn loose of she was infected. It did not take long to figure out how it works as it is a basic ZZ machine. The needle does seem to park on the left. Some park in the center and have a LMR control. Several park to the left and do not have the LMR lever. However one of them, the ALDENS, parks to the left on SS but it does have a LMR lever.

Had it not come with the offset SS foot and needle plate and owners manual I would have never known it. These machines are fascinating examples of what humans can design without computers. I have one of the plastic wannabee Singers. Ive had the shell off it had to fix the bent bobbin winder and was amazed at all the cheap stamped metal parts and plastic things inside. I guess I am further amazed that it actually sews nice stitches. For how long though, well thats any ones guess. Joe Probably needs oil and grease. Granddaughter did well getting it. I had it humming in about an hour after the basic clean oil adjust. Passed it on to a friend of a friend who was really in need of a sewing machine. It has seen many miles of stitches since then. Should serve your GD well. Happy sewing!! I can withdraw my consent at any time by unsubscribing.
