Massachusetts banned texting while driving in 2010, but police said it was difficult to enforce because they could not tell from a distance if a motorist was placing a call or texting. Now, the law forbids drivers from holding a phone for any reason. Drivers cannot look at texts, email, or, videos. Maps and navigation apps can be used, but the device has to be mounted on a dashboard or console.

Emily Stein of the Safe Roads Alliance began lobbying for the tougher law after her father Howard Stein was killed by a distracted driver in 2011. The new law will require police to keep a record of the race, gender, and age of the individual they ticket or issue a warning to. The data will be available in annual reports and if analysis finds evidence of racial profiling by a police department its officers would be required to undergo bias training. Democratic State Rep. Joe Wagner of Chicopee, who was on the conference committee that wrote the handsfree bill, said police departments have been collecting data on traffic stops for years but there was no requirement that it be analyzed. Until April 1st, 2020, police will issue warnings. Drivers ticketed a second time must attend a class on distracted driving. The Enhanced License to Carry Concealed Weapons I.C. 183302K is also issued by Idaho Sheriffs. Questions regarding the application process should be directed to an Idaho Sheriff. Therefore, if you have an Idaho Concealed Weapons License and are planning to visit a state that has concealed weapons license reciprocity with Idaho, remember that you are subject to the laws of that state, including any county or city ordinances, that apply to concealed weapons licenses and concealed weapons carry. It is your responsibility to familiarize yourself with those laws, ordinances and codes and comply with them. Concealed weapons license reciprocity in any form is simply that, reciprocity, and it does not immunize a person from criminal or civil consequences for breaking the law. Also, please note that some state grant reciprocity to Idaho Concealed Carry Licenses for concealed firearms only, and do not extend reciprocity for other weapons that Idaho includes under its Concealed Weapons Licenses, such as dirks, dirk knives, bowie knives, daggers or any other deadly or dangerous weapon. Only people that need to be present can be in the building. No visitors or nonessential people. No children without an appointment. Class B holders are also permitted to operate any commercial motor vehicle included in Class C provided they have the appropriate endorsements. Although all states with the exception to Hawaii permit drivers younger than 21 to apply for a CDL, they may only apply for intrastate commerce which restricts driving to state of residence only. For example, an 18yearold Class A CDL holder who resides in Minnesota is permitted to operate a Commercial Motor Vehicle within anywhere across Minnesota state only. However, until they reach age 21 they may not drive under federal law in Michigan, Wisconsin, South Dakota, North Dakota, or any state where they do not live. This restriction may also apply to drivers age 21 or over that have medical issues that may prevent one from properly being able to leave state residence without having difficulty. Furthermore, a CDL cardholder must be 21 years of age or over in order to transport placarded hazardous material and operate a school bus transporting students under 21 years of age. As of June 2020, this proposal is left abandoned and unlikely to pass in the future. The Federal Highway Administration FHWA has developed testing standards for licensing drivers. U.S. states are able to issue CDLs only after a written and practical test have been given by the State or approved testing facility. States are free to enact endorsements at the state level. For example, in New York State, a W endorsement is required to operate a tow truck. A CDL holder planning to become a School Bus Driver will also need the Passenger Vehicle P endorsement, pass a background check by the Transportation Security Administration, and a sex offender background check. This endorsement requires a road test. A background check is required by the Transportation Security Administration. Per federal regulations, the holder must be 21 years of age or over for this endorsement.

A background check is required by the Transportation Security Administration. This endorsement is mandatory for all Class A applicants. Though, applicants may still apply for a Class B or Class C CDL without this endorsement. Any other restrictions have been promulgated at the state level. Some states, such as Ohio, for example require 160 hours of classroom and on the road training. Training may be obtained by completing a qualified CDL training program through a DMV approved truck driving school. These training programs specialize in teaching potential truck drivers the necessary skills and knowledge to properly and safely operate a truck, including map reading, trip planning, and compliance with U.S. Department of Transportation laws, as well as backing, turning, hooking a trailer, and road driving. The overall purpose of these training schools is to help truckers to be pass the CDL knowledge and skills tests as well as advanced driving techniques such as skid avoidance and recovery and other emergency actions for situations such as a breakaway trailer and hydroplaning. These classes usually go well beyond the training the typical noncommercial driver receives, such as the drivers education provided in high school. There are a number of licensed CDL training schools around the United States and many trucking companies operate their own schools as well. To pass the driving skills test the student driver must successfully perform a set of required driving maneuvers. The driving skill test must be taken in a vehicle that the driver operates or expects to operate. For certain endorsements, such as Air pneumatic Brakes, the driving skills test must be taken in a vehicle equipped with such equipment. You will also need to show you do in fact show the characteristics of an aware and fully operative driver. This does not exclude certain disabilities, however, you must meet standard requirements, required by the safety operators.

The test must be the same as those given by the State issuing the CDL and the instructors must meet the same professional certification as State instructors. A valid medical certificate must be filled out by a medical professional listed on the National Registry of Certified Medical Examiners at the conclusion of an extensive physical exam, with a copy provided to the state Bureau or Department of Motor Vehicles compliance unit. See Physical qualifications for drivers page of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration. States have to use both CDLIS and NDR to check a drivers record before a CDL can be issued. To gain permission to access to the CDLIS and NDR databases one should visit the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration FMCSA Technical Support Web site for instructions on how this information is accessed and who can access it. Trucking companies can use a commercial service that has clearance for providing this information as a means of screening prospective employees. Additionally, an operator of a CMV that is found to have any detectable amount of BAC above 0.0% will be put out of service for a minimum of 24 hours. The notification must be made by the end of the next business day following receipt of the notice of the suspension, revocation, cancellation, lost privilege or disqualification. Violation of this requirement may result in civil or criminal penalties. A Class C Licence allows the holder to drive cars, utilities, vans, some light trucks, carbased motor tricycles, tractors and implements such as graders. You can also drive vehicles that seat up to 12 adults, including the driver. It also includes vehicles in class HC. Class 1 governs vehicles with a GLW gross laden weight or GCW gross combined weight of less than 6,000 kg, and Class 6 governs motorcycles. Gaining a Class 5 is not dependent on holding a Class 3. Once a driver has a Class 2 they can progress straight through to Class 4 and Class 5.

Each progression 2 to 3, 2 to 4, or 4 to 5 requires having held an unrestricted licence of the preceding class for at least six months. For drivers aged 25 or over the minimum period for holding the unrestricted time is reduced to three months, or waived entirely on completion of an approved course of instruction. The endorsements are Must be renewed every five years Where the holder also has a heavy vehicle Class 2 or Class 4 licence, they are permitted to drive heavy special vehicles. Otherwise the limits for Class 1 6,000 kilograms 13,000 lb apply. These endorsements are issued for one or five years, at the option of the applicant at the time of purchase. The driving tests for both are the same, but only class 4 private light bus licence can be applied after passing the test. In order to apply for a class 5 public light bus licence, a driver has to take an additional Preservice Training Course for Public Light Bus Drivers before submitting the application The driving tests for both are the same, and class 4 private light bus licence is issued automatically at the same time when applying class 9, 10 licences after passing the test. In addition, class 5 public light bus licence can be applied after taking an additional Preservice Training Course for Public Light Bus Drivers. The driving test requirement is the same with public bus class 10, and is only retained with historical interest. This has been relaxed such that a driver passing test on a franchised public bus can get classes 9, 10 in addition to class 17, and original drivers holding class 17 without classes 9, 10 can also apply them for free without taking tests. Class 2 light goods vehicles licence is issued in addition to class 18 after passing the test. Class 2 light goods vehicles and class 18 medium goods vehicles licences are issued in addition to class 19 after passing the test. The driver has to obtain full licence of class 18 medium goods vehicles at least before applying.
