Remain stopped until the light turns green and the intersection is clear. EXCEPTION You may make a right turn on a red signal only if there is no sign prohibiting a right turn on red and if the intersection is equipped a steady DON'T WALK signal is being displayed. Then, you may make a right turn after yielding to pedestrians and other traffic in, or approaching, the intersection. The purpose of the yellow light is to allow vehicles already in the intersection to clear the intersection safely. Do not try to "beat the light" if you have not already entered the intersection. You must yield to pedestrians and vehicles in the intersection. You can turn right on a red arrow after stopping if you follow the EXCEPTION rule under RED LIGHTS. This means the same as a stop sign. The line is white on two-way roads and on the right edges of one-way roads. The line is yellow on the left edges of one-way roads. To make a safe turn you should Here are two rules to help you On a right turn, turn into the right lane. What must you do The driver behind you should have 3 or 4 seconds warning before you make your turn. If you are planning to turn at an intersection, start signaling about half a block away. They may drive into your path. As the vehicle in front of you passes that object, begin to count seconds, one thousand one, one thousand two, one thousand three and so on until your vehicle reaches the sign, pole, bridge or tree. If you pass the object before you have reached the desired distance in seconds, ease up on the accelerator and try again. That vehicle is too close.

NEVER drive off the pavement or main traveled portion of the road to pass another vehicle. It also helps you save gas. What are you looking for NEVER take your eyes off the road for more than an instant. People take chances to try and pass a slow vehicle. Signal your intention to pull out. What should you do to avoid this Some vans that are equipped with wheelchair ramps can require an additional 8 feet of space. Use tire chains on very slippery roads. Do not start driving until the windows are defrosted and clean. Ice may be on bridges even if the rest of the pavement is clear. Keep your exhaust system free from leaks. Carbon monoxide poisoning is much more likely to occur during the winter time when you drive with all the windows closed. You cannot smell these fumes and they are deadly. Signs of carbon monoxide poisoning are a being tired; b yawning; c dizziness; d becoming suddenly sick to your stomach. You, as a driver are responsible for your vehicle at all times and must ensure that it is safe for other travelers as well. If you must drive, you should Wait until visibility improves. Do not creep along at 5 or 10 miles per hour. Wet leaves can be very slippery. Turn on your headlights in rain! Begin stops early Signal your intentions asap. At speeds up to 35 MPH, most tires will "wipe" the road surface the same way a windshield wiper cleans the windshield. However, as the speed increases, the tires cannot "wipe" the road as well and start to ride up on a film of water just like a set of water skis. In most vehicles, hydroplaning begins at about 35 MPH and increases with speed to about 55 MPH, at which point the tires may be totally running on the water. In a bad rainstorm, the tires may lose all contact with the road at 55 MPH. If this is the case, there is no friction when braking, accelerating or cornering. A gust of wind, a curve or a slight turn can cause a skid.

Anytime your vision is limited, or when you cannot clearly make out objects at a distance of 1000 feet. You could be temporarily blinded. If you must park by the side of the road, pull over as far as possible, turn off the engine, lock the doors, open the windows slightly for ventilation and sleep for a while. Within 150 feet of an oncoming vehicle. At least 150 feet when following. Do not wait for other drivers to dim their headlights. A blinded driver might crash into you! Slowing down while in the curve could be too late to keep control of the vehicle. Be ready for a stopped vehicle, or an oncoming vehicle on your side of the road. Your stopping distance ALSO increases. Your engine will help you slow down. Its AGAINST THE LAW. It could harm the engine, clutch and transmission. How must you handle this Fix in your mind what you should do when an emergency occurs BEFORE it happens. What should you do if this happens Blowouts occur more often than most drivers suspect and the behavior of the vehicle depends on which tire fails. In a front tire blowout, the vehicle will swerve to the side of the blowout. In a rear tire blowout, the vehicle will sway from side to side fishtail. If you have a sudden tire blowout, you will hear a loud "thump, thump, thump." You should Traveling long distances at high speeds. This can cause the air pressure to increase by 4 pounds. Blemishes such as cuts and bulges How should you treat this situation Always be sure your brakes work properly If the brakes suddenly give out you should Then call for help. Do not try to drive the vehicle to a garage. What do you do You have several things you can do If your vehicle is not equipped with ABS, push the brake pedal hard and as the vehicle begins to skid quickly, let up on the brake. Then quickly push it down again. Continue this quick pumping action until you have stopped the vehicle. The other driver might suddenly realize the mistake and steer back onto the left side of the road.

NEVER SWERVE TO THE LEFT to avoid a crash. The other vehicle might swing back into the path of your vehicle or you might hit other oncoming traffic. Do everything to avoid a crash with another vehicle. As a rule, try to hit with a glancing blow rather than headon. This may happen when another vehicle is about to hit you from the side or rear. By always being alert. That should you NOT do You should If you have your safety belt fastened, you might remain conscious and if you do not panic, you will have time to escape. This way you will not be struck by pieces of the vehicle when it is struck by the train. If you must walk for help, walk on the left edge of the road facing oncoming traffic. Use a flashlight when walking for help at night. If you have flares or reflectors, place them 200 feet in front and 200 feet to the rear of the vehicle to warn approaching drivers. Because drivers follow too closely. This design lets vehicles cross, enter or leave either highway without interfering with other vehicles. Make sure that both you and your vehicle are in good condition. These are short, oneway ramps that allow for safe and easy entry onto the freeway. The entrance will take you to the acceleration lane. As you approach and enter the acceleration lane, increase your speed to match that of vehicles on the expressway, if possible. Watch for an opening, turn on your signal light and merge smoothly with the other traffic. Drivers already on the expressway should allow room for those entering, but the driver entering the expressway must yield to them if they do not. DO NOT come to a full stop in the acceleration lane unless traffic conditions are such that you have no other choice. If there is no acceleration lane, you must always yield or stop if necessary. Do not try to force your way into the traffic stream. Turn your head to check your blind spot. Cutting back into the right lane too soon could cause a crash!

After you check the traffic is far enough behind you, and you have plenty of room to maneuver. Double or triple that distance in bad weather. Where should you stop Pull off the highway at the first rest stop or highway service area. How should you prepare for your exit Signal your intent to exit. Move into the deceleration lane and slow down. NEVER slow suddenly on the expressway. Be ready to stop. How long does it normally take to reach your brain It reduces alertness. It alters vision. The legal limits are 0.08 for persons 21 years of age or older and 0.02 for those under age 21 years of age. However, under New Hampshire law, if you have prior test results OR a prior refusal on your record within 10 years, the suspension shall be 2 years. Here are a few things to remember Read the label of any prescription and over the counter drug you purchase. Any drug that "may cause drowsiness or dizziness" is one you should not take before driving. The note should contain the same information as above and the date and time of the crash.

High voltage wires can transmit lethal voltage through the ground for distances of several hundred feet, and even further if the ground is wet. If you are in the vehicle and a wire has fallen across it, remain in the vehicle and have someone send for the power company to come and shut off the current. In a life or death situation, when escape from the vehicle becomes necessary, a long, dry piece of wood can sometimes be used to push a wire off a vehicle, or another vehicle can be used to push the vehicle off the wire. If another vehicle is used, the drivers must be sure both vehicles are clear of the wire before exiting either vehicle. A clean piece of material such as a tissue or handkerchief may be used. Motorcycles are entitled to the same full lane width as all other vehicles.

Good motorcycle drivers are CONSTANTLY CHANGING positions within that lane to help their ability to see and be seen, and to avoid objects in or near the road. Never move into the same lane alongside a motorcycle, even if the lane is wide and the cyclist is riding far to one side. Do Not try to crowd cyclists in any way or force them to the edge of the road. Allow even more following distance for a motorcyclist when it is raining or the road surface is wet and slippery. Skilled motorcycle riders will slow down under these conditions. Remember, motorcycles only have 2 wheels compared to your four. Also, be alert to the problem of glare that rain and wet roads create, especially at night. It is easy to lose sight of a motorcycle and its rider under the best of conditions. Rain, wind, dust and smog affect the cyclist's vision far more than yours in an enclosed vehicle. Windy conditions can actually move a motorcycle out of its lane of travel. Areas to look out for are wide open, long stretches of highways and bridges. Fast moving large trucks have been known to create wind blasts which can startle a cyclist and, under certain conditions, actually move cyclists out of their path of travel. The rider may slow down or change direction so that the tracks can be crossed head on. Because of this feeling, the inexperienced rider may slow down or change lanes suddenly. Add 1 additional foot for every 10 m.p.h. over 30. If there is not enough space to pass, slow down and wait until traffic has cleared. Its not helpful to that person.
