Keno rules are very simple. The game is like an instant online lottery or a custom bingo game. You can pick between two and 10, 15, or 20 numbers from the 80 available. The game will then select 20 numbers at random and award a payout based on how many you matched.

8. During the draw, any numbers a player has successfully matched will typically be highlighted in some way.

Remember, there are no guarantees, and every strategy has its flaws. We’ll explain the pros and cons of this one here.

(8) Some players like to use a keno system to increase their odds. Sorry to break it to you, but these simply don't work. They're based on gamblers superstitions and myths. For example, people look for 'hot numbers' or 'cold numbers' and bet on those. Unfortunately, every number has an equal chance of being drawn each time. If you think you've seen a number come up more times than others recently, there's no guarantee at all that it will come up again. Winning in keno will require you to dispell these myths – they're inaccurate and will lead you to make bad decisions if you believe them.

If you want to understand how to consistently win at keno games, there are a few fundamental principles you need to get a grip on first. If you read here regularly, you'll know we don't sell BS systems and lies – we prefer using the scientific method and backing our claims up with data. What we've learned about real money keno is this:

Most players simply have their favorite or just lucky numbers and their combinations which they bet on.

If you've read many of the other posts on this site, you already know what the house edge is. But if not, here's a quick refresher:
