While local sports betting action has expanded rapidly since 2018, state-licensed online casino gambling still lags way behind, but is at least alive and breathing. These domestic online casinos struggle to compete with the long-standing legit online casinos that operate offshore and have been providing reliable real money casino gambling to Americans for years.

While every Internet gambling site features multiple flavors of online video poker, real multiplayer poker tables are only available at a few of the biggest sites in the industry.

Why this focus on so-called “payment processors?” Put simply, the processor is the lowest-hanging fruit for the government to go after. That’s because the federal government doesn’t have a legal leg to stand on when it comes to challenging the private gambling habits of its citizens. The intended result of this attack on banks was to make life difficult for Americans who gamble online – and the UIGEA has certainly accomplished that.

If we couldn’t actually win real money gambling online, we wouldn’t be members at these sites. And frankly, we wouldn’t tell anyone else to be, either.

Note: Cryptocurrency deposits typically earn 2-3X more online casino free spins, sports betting free plays, and free poker cash than standard deposits made using more traditional gambling banking options.

Editor’s note: Bear in mind that laws are likely to change over time, as is the way those laws are enforced. Also, understand that I’m not a lawyer. I’m a writer and amateur gambler with a little experience and a library card – I don’t have the training or the inclination to practice gambling law. That means check appropriate sources if you need legitimate legal counsel.

Or rather, they are if you sign up and play only with those sites we recommend here.

DOJ filed a motion to dismiss the Complaint on several different grounds:

Under NRS 465.092 it is a criminal misdemeanor to use the Internet to accept or receive a bet from anyone in Nevada. The statute specifies that where the person accepting the bet is outside of Nevada, then the crime is deemed to have commenced outside the state but to be consummated in Nevada.

When you are looking at what states is online gambling legal, you should also take a look at which jurisdictions the software has been implemented in. The problem with some online casinos is that they are not licensed in certain areas or with certain tax codes. This can lead to problems with the authorities in those jurisdictions. The fact that the software is hosted in different parts of the world means that people in other parts of the world can have access to it. In some jurisdictions, the laws against online gambling do not apply to the hosted software, and in others, the laws against gambling online will still apply if the player plays in the player web-based interface.

That's also why we routinely put new online casinos through their paces for a year or more before ever recommending them as legitimate operations.

Jeffrey Rodefer notes: "A conviction under the Travel Act necessitates a violation of either a state or federal law. However, the government need not prove that the defendant specifically intended to violate state or federal law. [Footnotes omitted.] Thus, this is a crime where if you intended to commit the act it does not matter if you in fact knew that your act was a violation of any specific state criminal law.

The same sort of principle was recently applied in a criminal context in United States v. Lee, No. 01-1629 (3rd Cir. 2/20/2004) (3rd Cir., 2004). Defendant Lee was an official of the International Boxing Federation, which is headquartered in the state of New Jersey. He was convicted under the Travel Act (as well as several other laws.) The predicate state offense he was charged under was a New Jersey commercial bribery statute.

Lee was found to have accepted bribes to cause various boxers to receive higher positions in the IBF rankings.
