The late Chairman of LVS Sheldon Adelson has long be against online gaming. He even led various campaigns in attempt to stop it and created an organization, called Coalition to Stop Internet Gaming (CSIG). The rationale behind his positions is that online gaming leads to higher levels of addiction, as well as leads to substantial losses for gamblers.

According to Will Hersley, Investments and co-founder of Round Hill, the pandemic played a huge role in LVS's decision to enter online gaming scene, since the coronavirus situation caused the retail operations to suffer.
