The rationale behind the Roulette Analyzer is based on the idea that the bigger the field of numbers, the more likely you will be able to identify patterns and thereby create your systems around the likely outcomes which these patterns reveal. It's totally un-mathematical because as I said; "The 2.7% house advantage always wins". Nevermind, you are going to play anyway and here's how you can play without losing any money, testing your systems in the comfort of your own home, on your big screen TV.

The data shown are: in yellow the frequencies to follow in the white column are shown the current delays, with the color of pink faded we can find the number that indicates the maximum delay reached so far. In the white average column is telling us the average delay, so every time that particular horse is going out and in the last column, we can find consecutive delays. The same explanation applies to the finals. You can sort these delays or frequencies or maximum delays from lowest to highest by clicking on the name of the statistic. For those who want to save the order of the statistics by setting them from lowest to highest thanks to the Round checkbox at the top of the screen.

Summary: In this screen you can order the delays as you like from Major to minor or the other way around. If the delay is highlighted in yellow and because it has reached the value you set and then it is a hot number to play with. You can set and correct a setting by marking the checkbox at the top with the symbol (high or low).

One click of the button generates 1000 (25 x 40) random numbers between 0 and 36. Then you simply click the number on the official roulette layout to reveal where they occur in the database. If you want to see more than the location of just one number, hold the 'shift' key and collect more numbers. You may want to know when 13/31 occurs and what follows when it does, or what is the largest run in the 1-18s or maybe the best time to bet on the columns. These will be highlighted when you select the appropriate buttons on the layout. If you wish you can save each database of 1000 numbers and put them all into one huge database in an XL spreadsheet. 1000 x 1000 is a million. The large size of the database may reveal patterns much like the satellite weather forecasts do. In early days, weather forecasters only collected local data like barometer pressure and winds. However, there could be a giant front coming in from 1000km away and when it hits, the local data is useless. That larger system overrides the local weather. This is how Roulette Analyser may forecast patterns for you which can never be done by writing numbers down as they are spun on the wheel in the Casino. It takes too long anyway. I calculated that it would take 12 hours a day, 5 days a week to write down 1000 real Roulette spins in the Casino. There just isn't enough time in one lifetime to get the amount of numbers needed to follow patterns in this way. Baden Baden casino in Germany will sell you fields of real roulette spins but again we are talking only thousands of numbers and they are not cheap.

This is for genuinewinner.com players only. Successful professional play all starts with finding the most predictable roulette wheels. There is a lot to assess and it normally can take a day just to properly assess which wheel is likely to be the most profitable in a casino. This software is installed on mobile phones and allows you to assess which wheel is best, in 10% of the time it normally takes. It performs a few functions, but one example is you can collect ball timings for multiple spins, then assess how consistently the ball rolls between different spins. This tells you how early you can get "accurate" predictions with technology like roulette computers. You can also assess whether or not the rotor is changing speed after no more bets is called. It performs many functions that both save you time, and ensure you easily find which wheels you should focus on. The software is operated on a mobile phone via hidden cables, so you can very discretely assess the wheels.

Although the scheme seems logical, it's still unclear how to win back your lost money. Of course, you can take a risk and make a large bet, but you can't be sure of winning.

This is the main problem about such 'smart' software. It just calculates probability based on a small number of samples. To get a reliable estimation, you need to make thousands of bets. And even then there is still a slim chance of losing.
