Last month, operators in the state generated over $95 million in revenues from the online gambling industry. Online sportsbooks fared well too, generating over $32 million. The online casino totals rival that of New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

In fact, the online casino revenues were so high that they were close to meeting that of Pennsylvania. In the next few months, we could see Michigan overtake the Keystone State and move into the number two position as the top operator in the United States.

New Jersey hit around the $113 million mark, so Michigan was not too far from that point as well. It would be amazing to see the state push ahead and become the new leader. However, if it is possible, it will take months before the revenue totals surpass the $100 million mark.

As more operators start to enter the market, like Gun Lake, it will help to generate more revenues. We will stay tuned to any updates and provide any information on the latest revenues in Michigan to see how well the state is faring along with individual operators.
