Real money online slots offer the same big jackpots that regular slot machines offer. In fact, some online slots offer bigger rewards than regular slot games, such as Mega Moolah in 2015:

On 6 October 2015 British Army veteran Jon Heywood won a massive £13,209,300 playing Microgaming's Mega Moolah on Betway. With a .25p bet, Heywood won more than 52 million times his wager. He beat the previous record holder, an anonymous player in Finland who played Mega Fortune on Paf.com in January 2013, by more than £15,000.

As game developers seek to create more engaging and exciting online slots games, their growing complexity can confuse gamblers. Our experts have identified the payment symbols gamblers should look for in any online slots games to help increase their chances of winning real money:

Wilds – Players can use a wild symbol to substitute another missing symbol to create a winning payout line. With online slots, wild symbols can be static or dynamic, and in complex slots games they can even trigger other events, such as bonus rounds.

Scatters – Like the name indicates, scatter symbols can appear randomly across the reels and rows. These symbols can be lucrative, but a minimum number are required to trigger any rewards. Secure enough however, and gamblers can win free spins, bonus rounds, even a progressive jackpot.

Multipliers – This symbol will increase the amount of your wins by two, three, even tenfold. Multipliers occur randomly across the reels, just like scatters, but are most often found during bonus rounds and free spins.

Sticky – A newer feature to online slots, the sticky symbol will keep a reel fixed in place for several spins. Sticky symbols are sometimes attached to other bonus symbols such as Wild or Scatter, meaning they can make your real money slots gameplay particularly lucrative.

Stacked – This feature is another new concept to online slots. Stacked symbols take up a larger space on the reels, meaning the odds of them becoming part of a payline increases.

Return-to-Player Percentage (RTP) – Also known as slot payout percentage, this is the most important feature for slot players. Essentially, this statistic is used by casinos to tell players the percentage of their wagered money they can potentially win back. The RTP is calculated over thousands, even millions of slot spins, to create an average for players. For instance, if a slot game has 97% RTP, then that means a player can potentially win £97 for every £100 they enter in the online slot game. A high RTP means players are more likely to land some winnings compared to low-RTP slot games.

Volatility – This term refers to the frequency a slot machine lands winnings and is also called hit frequency or velocity. High volatility games pay winnings sporadically but hit large sums when they do pay out. Low volatility games pay out frequently, but the winnings are more modest amounts. Slot players should choose slot games with a velocity that matches their bankroll and gameplay requirements.

Pay Table – Slot players can find the pay table on any game and discover information such as bonus rounds, bet limits, paylines, RTP and more. Always check the pay table first to find out essential information for winning bonus features and progressive jackpots.

Mobile Compatibility – When gambling online, check that the slot game is compatible with the device you want to play on. Otherwise, the gameplay might not be optimized for your chosen settings

To learn how to win on slot machines, it's important to understand how these casino games work. Online slots use random number generators (RNG) to determine results, and most will have at least five reels. More reels and symbols mean there are a greater number of possibilities for players to consider when placing a bet.

The RNG means results are determined entirely by chance, so slot payout patterns are almost impossible to discern. This also means any hot or cold streaks with online slots games occur completely random, too.
