Free online roulette games work in a similar way to their real money equivalents. Instead of a dealer spinning the wheel, the game software uses a random number generator to determine where the ball lands each time. The other difference is you're not winning or losing real money. Instead, any win or loss is for token money with no intrinsic value, so you can continue playing online roulette for free without any impact on your bank balance.

Essentially, playing free roulette means betting fake money on what you think will be a winning section of the wheel. The computer dealer spins the wheel with a small ball inside that stops on the winning number. First you click to place your bets on your chosen roulette board number. Then if the ball stops on your number or a range that includes the number, you win.

It seems as if the California problem gambling site considers any game played on the internet to be an "electronic gambling game," and I get that. I'd probably include slot machines and video poker games played in brick and mortar casinos, though. That would also include the less common games, video blackjack and video roulette.

After all the players have completed their hands, the dealer's hole card is exposed. The dealer must draw on a total of 16 or less, until reaching a total of 17 or higher on some tables, while having to hit a soft 17 on other tables. Each layout will designate which style game is being dealt, or feel free to ask your dealer. If the dealer's total is less than a player's, or if the dealer exceeds a point count of 21, the player win even money! The legal definition agrees that risking money on an uncertain outcome is gambling, but it seems to make an exception for something that's not under a person's control or influence. This leads me to believe that a bet on a sporting contest that you're involved in wouldn't constitute gambling—at least not in a legal sense. Playing a game of billiards, darts, or golf (just to name 3 examples) for $20 with your drinking buddy wouldn't count.

Mini Baccarat is an elegant, simple game to play. There are only two decisions to make: how much to bet, and whether to bet on the Bank or the Player. To bet on the Bank, a Player simply places his/her bet in the area closest to his/her marker "Banker." Likewise, to bet on the Player, a Player simply places his/her bet on the area marked "Player." The Casino will collect 5% commission of all money won on the Bank. An additional bet a Player may make is a Tie Bet (that the two hands will end in equal totals). A winning Tie Bet pays 8 to 1. As for the game itself, Mini Baccarat is played with eight decks of cards. Any card from 2 to 9 has its face value. Ace equals one. All 10's and face cards, or any combination of them, have no value. When the total of the cards exceeds 9, the first digit of the total is dropped, because in the game of Mini Baccarat, all hands must be a single-digit number from 0 to 9. So,  $7 + 4 = 1$ , Queen + Ace = 1.

Live dealer roulette gives you the ease and thrill of online gaming but with the fun and interaction of a real life croupier. You can interact with the human dealer who'll be able to hear you and respond back. It's a great option if you play online roulette at home but still want the social interaction of being in a land casino. The fact that human dealers are used means live dealer roulette is often only available to play with real money.

In multi ball roulette up to 10 balls can be in play at any one time. The number of balls in use has a direct effect on the odds and you can select and deselect balls till you reach a total you're happy with. The odds in multi ball roulette also increase because no two balls can land in the same pocket, giving you more chances to correctly guess the outcome.

There's no trick to guarantee winning at online roulette but you can minimize the amount of money you'll lose. Heading to a European roulette table over an American one is a good starting point, as it takes the double zero out of the equation, so halving the house edge you're up against.
