A detailed business plan will go a long way when purchasing a White Label solution: your vision for your project will help you and the provider organize every aspect of your business to maximize your chances of achieving the results you're aiming for. Your region of operation will determine what payment methods would be best for your casino, as well as the game providers and types of games you will probably offer. Your casino name and technical specifications will also have to be submitted before you start the preparation process.

For this reason, White Label suppliers prefer to cooperate with experienced casino operators, a principle Slotegrator follows as a rule. However, aspiring first-time operators have a perfectly viable option in the Turnkey solution, which covers all the technical aspects of the platform. The horrible truth is that churning out your marketing money on a badly conceived 'me too' cookie-cutter white-label casino brand will probably allow you to break even at best. I go back to the underlying theme of my previous article of having some kind of practical insights into the marketplace. I think ground zero is knowing you can get converting traffic. Then it's being smart enough to build a brand which resonates with your target audience. Put the two together and you're in a good place. That's why if you've lined up a savvy affiliate that is been in the game for more than three or four years and some random person with a few million pounds who reckons he can make even more cash running a casino, I'd put my money on the affiliate any day. In the next issue, I will talk about brand and what it actually means in the context of a white-label casino.

In my last article for iGB Affiliate, I discussed the pros and cons of setting up your own white label casino. This time I want to talk about some of my own experiences and the financials involved in setting up my/your own white label casino.

Platform software, including the back end and the front end, is also a part of White Label set of services. This part of the White Label package handles all the technical aspects of the operation. With a high-quality platform, issues such as technical errors, problems with transactions, loading speed, website navigation mistakes, and slow player support don't have to be handled as they come up but are rather ironed out during the development stage. In addition to smooth functionality, White Label casinos also include design and web hosting.

Affiliate websites have one thing in common: they all contain really useful information, such as iGaming guides and online casino rankings, so they attract users who search for the best casino to play at and actually do play after following the link. However, they may differ in general approach. There are portal-like affiliate websites such as AskGamblers or LCB that target a wide audience and cover everything related to online gambling. Then there are more niche websites that specialize, for instance, in casinos licensed in the UK or Bitcoin-focused casinos — like BitcoinBuster or Bitcoin Chaser.

Perhaps the most viable option, though, is to choose an affiliate marketing platform that meets industry standards and corresponds to your needs. Companies that provide online casino software usually build flexible and easy-to-use affiliate systems taking into account their clients' expertise and preferences. They are motivated to provide an effective tool within their platforms that helps operators achieve maximum results with their affiliate marketing strategies.

To start a White Label sports betting and casino business would be one of the best decisions you can make right now. Why?

I've been working within casino marketing for many years and I've always thought it would be great to build a truly scalable business around something I know a lot about. Fortunately, Tom Finlayson my CTO and Afërdita Pacrami the CEO of my digital marketing agency felt the same, so we started our first white label brand, Oshi. History tells us that it's always good to pick a niche and work your way from there. Having looked at the growth of bitcoin and the relative freedoms it gives consumers within iGaming, I figured that would be a good place to start and so I decided to work with SoftSwiss as the provider and Oshi.io was born. From there, we set up Tyche iGaming to act as a framework for building out more brands and reselling white label services.

Our White Label casino includes both purchasing online casino infrastructure itself and monthly royalties — payments in the form of revenue share. The final price depends on the project's specific terms and package of additional services. Moreover, experts from Slotegrator take into account a couple of factors that potential operators should consider in order to create a successful project.

Affiliates deliver referral traffic to online casinos by placing links and banners on their own websites. Sometimes they use banners that call for direct action, e.g. to register or make a deposit in a particular casino. The important thing is that casino affiliates bring super relevant traffic with higher rates of conversion into depositing players.

With that said, launching a white label is still the cheapest option compared to launching a casino on your own.

They usually have vast experience as online casino users and run blogs or do live streaming to share their gaming experience with other players. Sometimes casino affiliates have experience in online casino operation and know the other side of the business, too. In any case affiliates (or professional affiliate companies) are not strangers in the world of iGaming and know its ins and outs.

There are both advantages of white label operation and disadvantages. Ultimately, Whether or not it will be the most ideal choice for you will depend on your personal business goals, how much experience you have in the industry, and how much you want to be in control of the casino's development and operation. With that said, as TCS does like to be open and honest, here's a look at the most common pros and cons of white label:

As mentioned earlier, our White Label casino not only covers all technical aspects of an online casino project, but also takes care of administrative, legal, tax, and other business needs. On the other hand, operators who would rather be behind the wheel than riding shotgun might go for a purely technical solution that includes the platform but leaves them in control of everything else.

Slotegrator offers both options. We have developed two different sets of online casino services according to operators' experience and demands. Our White Label casino and Turnkey platform are similar in many aspects, but there are several different details to keep in mind.

Simple tracking. If you are using an effective affiliate system (online casino software usually has an affiliate module that facilitates easy management of their affiliate programs), it allows evaluating the performance of different affiliates. You can even see how your casino is doing on different affiliate websites. You can use this info for a better analysis of what ads and banners work best for you and adjust your affiliate program accordingly.

The White Label casino price depends on several factors. Definitely, the number and popularity of gaming providers play a role. Such major providers as NetEnt, Microgaming, Evolution Gaming and others add to the final price more than less-known providers. Surely, your players will be attracted by popular names, so it is worth integrating at least one famous provider into your casino.

At this stage, we're just keeping development and costs as low as possible whilst we build momentum. For us, customer acquisition and retention at a low cost is really the essence of everything we're working towards. Once we get a sense of typical customer values per acquisition, then we can start to spend more money on customer acquisition marketing. We assume the lifetime value of a customer is around $300 USD. Our strategy is slightly different to the majority of white label casinos in that we decided to release Oshi as soon as possible and learn from user interaction. We've since done a huge number of iterations to the site and we're getting closer and closer to what we think is an optimal user experience. From that, we will be able to work out whether we can acquire customers for a lower-than-average figure. Putting the rather optimistic figures of Figure 1 aside, these are some of the white label numbers I do know about:

While there are different ways to promote an online casino, affiliate marketing has deserved its status of the most effective. Of course, SEO, PPC, media advertising, exhibitions, and other offline activities should also be part of the bigger strategy (after all diversity always increases your chances of success) — but if we compare investments and outcome, affiliate marketing often wins the ROI competition. Let's have a deeper insight into who affiliates are, what benefits they bring to an online gaming business, and how to find the right affiliate marketing software.

White Label solutions accelerate the preparation and launch process for online casino operators, since they purchase the whole organization and only partly participate in the process — they are not required to obtain a license, buy software, and deal with all legal issues. However this package is not for everyone: the provider company in this case takes a significant legal responsibility for the actions of the operator, exposing them to the risk of the operator's failure.

There are several factors that impact the final cost of your White Label online casino but the most important one to consider is your affordability. The talk is about thousands, not hundreds of thousands, and our experts can offer you an option which would suit you the best.

Do some searches for 'white label casino' and you'll get lots of sites telling you how easy it is to get everything set up, do your marketing and off you go. One site had a small on-site calculator giving these numbers, assuming a Curaçao licence (which I have) and 2,500 estimated users in Year 1 targeting Europe.

Together Gaming's White Label partner solution includes casino, live casino, sports betting and lotto products under preferred licenses.

Many of you demand tenancies and payment per acquisition. From what my affiliate manager tells me, we're looking at $200 per acquisition. And then with revenue share, it seems to range from 25% all the way up to a maximum of 55%. Just on the theme of risk, paying affiliates a fixed amount per acquired customer is very risky in my opinion. If you're asking $200 per acquisition and the acquisition is defined as a person who places a minimum deposit, one big affiliate can turn on the tap and smash you financially. This is why I've stayed away from such deals, because there is not enough financial control. Also, it's really open to abuse by an unscrupulous affiliate. The problem with being another 'me too' white-label casino and working with affiliates is that you are just the same as the other 20 casinos that they've dealt with in the last month. So the real question is what you've got that gives them confidence in you converting and delivering them revenue?

By providing truthful information on various online casinos available on the market and sharing gambling tips and tricks, affiliates gain trust among players and manage to attract a significant audience to their websites. With skillful SEO, link building, and use of online forums, they manage to achieve high rankings in search engines. Once that's done, affiliate websites are ready for monetization: they start referring traffic to online casino operators.

At the same time, there are quite many new companies which also produce high-end software, which gives great player experience. These less-known companies are more affordable. The type of licence also impacts White Label online casino price. A Curacao licence is the most popular option, since it gives an operator freedom to operate any type of gambling business. However, there is a Maltese licence, which is highly prestigious but also has a higher price. Some more licences have been gaining popularity lately.

According to this concept, online casinos are an ideal alternative for those who want to bring a new casino to the market in a short time and at an affordable cost. White Label Casino is the best opportunity for entrepreneurs of any level to work in the field of gambling. If a company has not previously worked in the field of online casino – this is a chance to get acquainted with all operational activities. And if it has some projects already, then this is an excellent opportunity for diversification.

The initial setup cost and operation of a white label is cheaper than launching and operating a casino business from scratch.
