A spokesperson for Ty Warner Hotels & Resorts Bill Medel and Membership Directors Kelly Campbell and Johanna Dearingier tell us that upon opening, the Coral Casino – which as of March 2022 is now under Ty Warner's management instead of the Four Seasons – will be exploring new policies and procedures to create a better balance of use of the iconic club. This includes finding ways to offer more of a members-only experience with club facilities including the pool, fitness, locker rooms, and spa areas. "Our team has listened to members' concerns about the impact non-member visitors can have on the sense of connection and camaraderie among the membership as well as some challenges with crowded facilities and outdoor spaces, especially during peak seasons," Warner writes in a letter to members, who were offered temporary membership at the Montecito Club during the closure.

While the team seeks to retain the exclusivity of the Club, Tydes, the iconic property's oceanfront restaurant, may be made available to the public. "The restaurant must have the buzz, energy, and resources fitting of a place of Tydes' caliber. This approach will ensure we are able to attract a top chef and restaurant staff to generate excitement, and dedicate the full resources needed to support the restaurant," Warner writes. There will be members-only dining areas including the new member rooftop lounge, and there will be implementation of a members-priority reservation system. "The restaurant has the potential to offer a truly unparalleled dining experience with the highest caliber food and beverage offerings in an intimate setting with panoramic views of the ocean," the letter reads. The Coral Casino ballroom will continue to be an event venue for the community and public.

As a UK-licensed casino, Coral Casino has to adhere to incredibly strict regulations surrounding customer identity checks, and due to new legislation brought in by the UKGC, all UK players that join Coral Casino are required to verify their identity before they are able to begin playing any real money games at the casino – and even before they're able to deposit money.

Rest assured that Coral Casino are not running these source of wealth checks because they want to; the UKGC has been accused of being incredibly out of touch with online gambling, and virtually no players or operators are on board with these checks in the slightest. However, it is now the unfortunate reality of playing at online casinos located in the UK – so you don't really have much of a choice.

Coral Casino has an absolutely solid reputation when it comes to withdrawals, and it's very rare for withdrawals to take longer than 12 hours to be processed. The live coverage of sports is slightly flawed, and there are no bonuses for sports bettors, but overall the sportsbook is amazing for bettors across the world.

However, the UKGC has also brought in even stricter regulations surrounding the source of your wealth – and this is a very controversial move that now requires online casinos operating in the UK to verify where its players are getting their money from. This means that after you reach a certain threshold – a threshold which, by the way, is not made public – Coral Casino can ask you to upload copies of your bank statements and even ask for you to show them your payslips to prove where the money you are gambling with is coming from.
