(一)

Helen: Peter, you're free right now, aren't you?

Peter: Not really, but I can be. What can I do for you?

Helen: I need you to send this package to Mr. Anderson at Matrix Systems right away.

Peter: It's that important, isn't it? In that case, express mail will be fast enough for you, won't it?

Helen: No way! That takes a day or two at the least, and my client can't wait around that long for it.

Peter: Why not? It's not like he's a VIP or anything.

Helen: In fact, he is, and he's leaving on a business trip to Berlin, Germany, this afternoon. Now you can see that express mail won't be fast enough, can't you?

Peter: Yes, loud and clear. Then, I think it's best to call for a messenger to come and pick it up from us this morning.

Helen: I was thinking the same thing. Also, can you make sure that they rush it over to Matrix Systems before noon?

Peter: That shouldn't be a problem, but I think it's going to cost more.

Helen: Money is not a problem at this point, is it? We really can't lose this client.

(二)

Ben: There is still half a watermelon in the refrigerator, isn't there? Could you cut it into small pieces for the picnic?

Pam: I could do that if you really believe that is best, but I think I have a better idea.

Ben: You sure have a lot of ideas, don't you? So, what is it?

Pam: I can turn the half watermelon into a fruit basket.

Ben: Wait! What? How can you change a fruit into a basket? You don't know magic, do you?

Pam: Don't be silly. I'm going to make the watermelon look like a basket and then put fruit in it.

Ben: Oh, I got it now, so tell me the steps.

Pam: First, cut off part of the bottom to make it stand.

Ben: OK. What's next?

Pam: After that, scoop out all the flesh. The little red balls are beautiful, aren't they? Then, cut small triangles into the top edge of the watermelon.

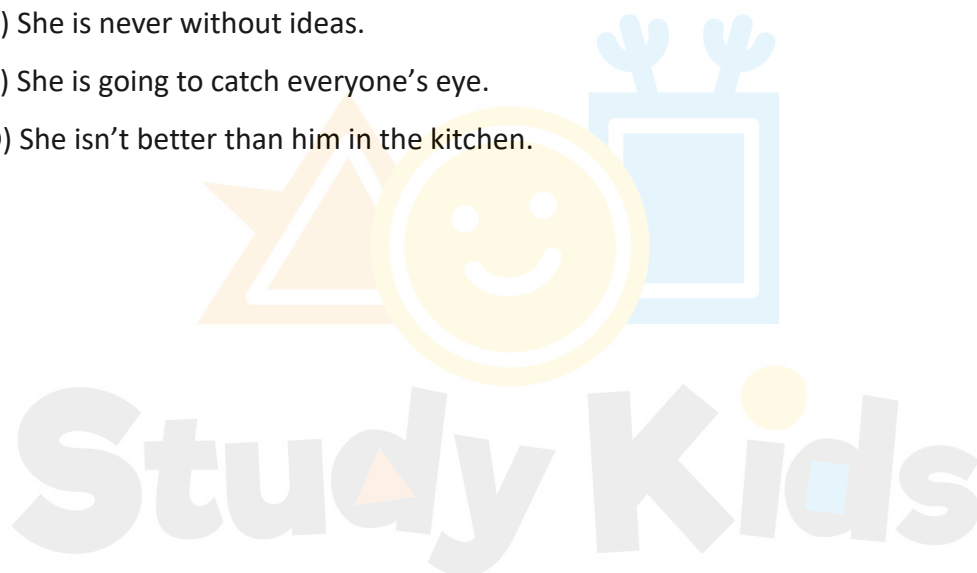

Ben: Wow! That looks so cool!

Pam: I'm not done yet. Last, make balls out of other fruit, mix them with the red ones, and put everything back into the new basket.

Ben: That is sure to catch everyone's eye, isn't it?
