Hokkaido is the second largest island of Japan. It is also the farthest north, so it is cooler than the other parts of Japan. The summers are warm and comfortable, not hot and humid. Also, there is no rainy season, so many Japanese people like visiting there between May and August. It's the best time to enjoy the great outdoors. Many people go there to look at the colorful fields of flowers and visit the farms to pick fresh apples, grapes, and strawberries. They also spend time hiking in the area's six national parks. There, they can see Sika deer, brown bears, and beautiful lakes.

Hokkaido's winter season is cold and gets lots of ice and snow. Because of that, it's great for skiing and snowboarding. The cold weather also makes it excellent for going to the area's hot springs. The best, though, are the big snow festivals. They take place every February, and people can see hundreds of snow and ice sculptures and even slide down giant snow slides. There are lots to do in every season in Hokkaido.

Ben: You really made this week's math lesson easy to understand, thanks.

Julie: Glad I could help. Speaking of help, how do I get to the museum from here? I'm meeting a friend there later.

Ben: Sure, just walk down Maple Street to Main Road. It's right on the corner. You can't miss it.

Julie: Cool. Also, when I came out of the subway station, I saw a coffee shop. Is it good?

Ben: I'm not sure, but there is a restaurant on Oak Street. It has a lot of delicious food, and I really love the hamburgers there.

Julie: Ooh, that sounds good. I'm in the mood for a good burger. Where is that place?

Ben: It's across from the bank and next to the hotel.

Julie: How do I get there from here?

Ben: The easiest way is to go straight down this way, turn left on Oak Street, and keep walking to Main Road.
